

Diamond Harris is a native of Gary, IN. In 2007 she started dancing in the sixth grade at Emerson School for the Visual & Performing Arts. When she discovered her passion for the art she became a member of South Shore Dance Alliance her seventh grade year. Throughout her high school years, she trained at the Alvin Ailey American Dance Theatre's Summer Intensives 3-consecutive years in New York City. In 2012, she had the opportunity of performing in "Memoria" with the Alvin Ailey American Dance Theatre company in Chicago, IL. After graduating in 2014 from Emerson, she went to further pursue her dance training at Point Park University. She has studied under numerous instructors such as Asia Dickens, Larry Brewer, Joshua Ishmon, Troy Powell, Johnathan Lee, Jason McDole, Garfield Lemonius, and many more. Diamond has also taught with Asia's Dance Factory for over 4 years. She continues to express her passion for the arts through her choreographic skills, and looks forward to seeing where dance will guide her future.
